Corps plans recreation usage public meeting, open house

Walla Walla, Wash., -- Natural resources officials from the Walla Walla District, U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, will hold an informational meeting and open house Aug. 24-26 concerning modernization of facilities.

The sessions will focus on Rooks Park and Bennington Lake. Information will also be available on Corps preparation for the upcoming Lewis and Clark bicentennial.

On Aug. 24, agencies and special interest groups will meet in downtown Walla Walla with Corps officials at the District Headquarters building, 201 North Third Avenue, from 7:30-9:30 p.m.

On Aug. 25 and 26, from 11 a.m.-3 p.m. each day, the general public is invited to an open house at the Mill Creek Project Office at 3211 Reservoir Road on the east end of Walla Walla near the community college. The staff will be available to answer questions and receive thoughts and ideas from the public.

Corps officials are interested in obtaining broad input of ideas and invite recommendations that are important for future planning. If you are unable to attend the open house or seeking more information, call Dave Hays, Mill Creek Operations Manager, at (509) 527-7160.
